

Foreign Credential Evaluation

Applicants applying for transfer admission from colleges and universities outside of the United States must submit their academic records to a foreign credential evaluation service. This service provides information to assist in determining an applicant's GPA relative to the American grading system, the transfer eligibility of university-level coursework, and the determination of class standing.

When ordering a foreign credential evaluation, it must meet the following criteria:

- It must have a course-by-course analysis
- It must show the college or university is accredited in U.S. terms.

Securing the evaluation and costs associated are your responsibility. An application without this evaluation will not be considered for admission.
